Threads seem to be the faster one on its comparison with the processes because of its ease of communication. However threads caused me a lot of problems that I still couldn't figure out because of the shared memory that all the threads and the main use. Here is a graph of comparison, upper is threads, lower is processes. Left side shows the seconds whereas the bottom side shows the different kind of files.